

In the past few years, because of the pandemic we observed that there were changes in the behavior of people towards each other, we realize that people are starting to become more blocked off from each other and giving off a stronger feeling of individualism from their actions. Moreover, with various government policies and rules taking action all across the world, it seems that our suspicions are starting to become a reality much quicker than we imagined. Thinking about the time before COVID, people never hesitated to help each other and shows more of their warmth to others, but now in these hard times people are scared to even see their own families and are even more scared of meeting strangers, even though they in need of help or they are offering help, this change in psychological behavior is certainly a hindrance towards helping people in need and that is ironic because during these hard times is probably when people need help the most. Other than that, we also realize that fewer companies and firms are willing to provide help for others, and that is where we come in. Our company "Odd Jobs" is the company with a dream to battle these problems, and rid of them permanently. We base our actions on care and trust for our customers, hence even during COVID we lend our hands to the people in need while still following the safety protocols to ensure the safety of both our customers and workers. Our company aims to help people with everyday problems, we advertise ourselves to be able to do anything as long as it does not involve criminal activities, from our website we offer you only a few of our services which include gardening, construction, providing mental support, and even providing basic medical support. Our motive for charging money for our services is so that we are able to make our processes safer and more efficient to broaden our reach further in order to help even more people in need, and by using our service you are bringing us one step closer to achieving that goal.
